

JOURNALISM

Journalism is a discipline of collecting, analyzing , verifying, and presenting news regarding current events, trends, issues and people. Those who practice journalism are known as journalists.

News-oriented journalism is sometimes described as the " first rough draft of history" because journalists often record important events, producing news articles on short deadlines. While under pressure to be first with their stories, news media organizations usually edit and proofread their reports prior to publication, adhering to each organization's standards of accuracy, quality and style.

Reporting

Journalism has its main activity the reporting of events- stating who, what, when , where, why and how, and explaining the significance and effect of events or trends. Journalism exists in a number of media: newspapers, television, radio, magazines and, most recently, the world Wide Web through the Internet.

The subject matter of journalism can be anything and everything, and journalists report and write on a wide variety of subjects; politics on the international, national, provincial and local news, economics and business on the same four levels,